

Anne-Marie McInally

I am a solicitor specialising in Employment Law. After graduating LLB(Hons) in 1993 I have worked as a union lawyer, currently as General Counsel for E tū which is the largest of the private sector unions in New Zealand with a membership of 54,000 workers. As well as representing members in ACC Reviews, I represent members in personal grievances and disputes with their employers which often involves attending Mediation, Employment Relations Authority hearings or Employment Court hearings. I have appeared in the Court of Appeal occasionally. A primary area of responsibility in my current role is providing advice to the union both as an employer and in our interface with members and employers. Of the work I do, the most satisfying is providing advice and information to members to assist them to engage with their employers to resolve employment relationship problems before they become insurmountable.
